

4 Held in Slaying Of Eastbay Scion

NOV 4 - 1970

Four men, including three from Oakland, were arrested today in connection with Monday night's holdup and slaying of Robert N. Burgess III, son of a prominent central Contra Costa County real estate developer, in a San Jose grocery store.

Burgess, 25, was shot near the heart by one of two holdup men at Spartan Market, San Jose, where he worked part-time.

Charged with robbery and homicide are Lionel Frazier, 17, of 1476 87th Ave., Oakland, held in juvenile hall in San Jose; Richard Bradford, 18, of 1038 76th Ave., Oakland, and Charles Oliver, about 23, of San Jose, both held in county jail in San Jose.

Emanuel Edwards, 20, of 2716 Havencourt Blvd., Oakland, was held in Oakland jail this morning while San Jose police made arrangements to transport him to San Jose.

Oakland police said the three Oakland men have long criminal records.

The arrests followed a complaint yesterday afternoon by a 16-year-old Oakland girl who said she had been raped by two men who were still in her house.

Two men being questioned about the incident, Edwards and Travis Robinson, 21, of 1162 77th Ave., Oakland, reportedly conversed in the rear seat of the police car about Monday night's shooting and were overheard by Sgt. Rhodney Duncan.

Subsequent investigation implicated Edwards and the other three. Robinson is being held in Oakland for investigation of rape.

Burgess was shot by the door of the grocery store Monday night. Another parttime clerk, Don Bigelow, 21, chased the holdup men in vain and then returned to the store to find Burgess had been shot.

Burgess was pronounced dead at Valley Medical Center in San Jose. He was a student at San Jose State College and would have graduated in business administration next February.

The development interests of both the dead youth's father and his late grandfather in Contra Costa County date back to the turn of the century.

The grandfather, R. N. Burgess, was the original developer of the Diablo Country Club, built the town of Clyde and the old shipyard there during World War I, and in later years developed the Lakewood area in Walnut Creek.

The elder Burgess also was said to have been the original builder of the South Gate Road section up Mt. Diablo — with a horse drawn grader in 1907 — and was instrumental in helping attain state park status for the mountain's summit.

His wife, the former Ann Fish, was from the pioneer family in the Lafayette-Orinda area from which Fish Ranch Road takes its name.

The father of the slain youth, Robert N. Burgess Jr., followed the family tradition and was in realty development also in Central Contra Costa County for many years, living in Walnut Creek and Diablo before the family moved to Incline Village at Lake Tahoe about two years ago.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Burgess Jr.; a sister, Elizabeth Ann Burgess of Incline Village, and a brother, Edward H. Burgess of Concord.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Friday at St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, 1550 Diablo Rd., Danville.
